

Down to the Earth Below

They say inside every man is a little boy trying to get out. Maybe its the other way around: outside every man theres a little boy struggling to get back in. The people that rule the world make it very hard for any of us to let the little boy in, and we all know why. If he gets back in and takes charge of things, the man wont get up and go to work in the morning, and then where will those people who rule the world be? Burke the Jerk isnt a grown up, but at age thirteen, hes got a pretty good idea what being a grown up really means, and has got an even better idea he never wants to go to grown up land, never wants to be a fat, sad worker bee whose only real job is to make other men rich. You want to laugh at poor little Burke the Jerk? Well, he saw his chance and took it. Did you?
