

Hiking Oregon's Mount Hood and Badger Creek Wilderness (Regional Hiking Series)

A mere 45 miles east of downtown Portland, unfolding from the slopes of 11,235-foot Mount Hood, are two of America's wilderness gems--The Mount Hood and Badger Creek wilderness areas. The Mount Hood Wilderness Areas 47,100 mountainous acres are home to black-tailed deer, black bears, elk, and some of the most varied and beautiful natural wildflower gardens in the world. Though smaller, the Badger Creek Wilderness Area is no less beautiful than its western neighbor and boasts easy solitude and a more temperate climate. Hiking Oregon's Mount Hood and Badger Creek Wilderness is your comprehensive guide to these showcase wilderness areas. This FalconGuide features 72 hikes and, for high-altitude enthusiasts, 3 routes to the summit of Mount Hood. With detailed trail descriptions, elevation profiles, and easy-to-read maps, Hiking Oregon's Mount Hood and Badger Creek Wilderness has all of the information you'll need for a safe and enjoyable trip to these pristine wilderness areas.
