The Fate of the Evangeline is a short story by Arthur Conan Doyle first published in The Boys Own Paper in December 1885. John Vincent Gibbs and Miss Lucy Forrester are in love with each other, but the Lucys father decided that she had to marry a rich young banker from good family. Very obedient, Lucy bends this choice by duty. Desperate, Gibbs decides to retire to the desert island of Ardvoe, on the coast of Scotland. After three months of loneliness, he sees Lucy, her father and her fiance landing on the island to spend a few days of vacation. The men sleep on the beach, but Lucy sleeps alone on the ship, The Evangeline. Gibbs decides to have a last discussion with Lucy.
