

Joels Luck Or Always Wide Awake

Joe's Luck Or Always Wide Awake

Horatio Alger

Joe Mason was alone in the world. A year previous he had lost his father, his only remaining parent, and when the fathers affairs were settled and funeral expenses paid there was found to be just five dollars left, which was expended for clothing for Joe. In this emergency Major Norton, a farmer and capitalist, offered to provide Joe with board and clothes and three months schooling in the year in return for his services. As nothing else offered, Joe accepted, but would not bind himself for any length of time. He was free to go whenever he pleased.
