Tis not a black coat and a little band, A velvet caped cloak, faced before with serge, And smelling to a nosegay all the day, 35 Or holding of a napkin in your hand, Or saying a long grace at a tables end, Or making low legs to a nobleman, Or looking downward with your eyelids close, And saying, Truly, ant may please your honour, 40 Can get you any favour with great men: You must be proud, bold, pleasant, resolute, And now and then stab, as occasion serves. Bald. Spencer, thou knowst I hate such formal toys, And use them but of mere hypocrisy. 45 Mine old lord whiles he lived was so precise, That he would take exceptions at my buttons, And being like pins heads, blame me for the bigness; Which made me curate-like in mine attire, Though inwardly licentious enough, 50 And apt for any kind of villainy. I am none of these common pedants, I, That cannot speak without propterea quod. Y. Spen. But one of those that saith, quandoquidan, And hath a special gift to form a verb. 55 Bald. Leave off this jesting, here my lady comes Enter the LADY, the K1ngs niece. Lady. The grief for his exile was not so much As is the joy of his returning home. This letter came from my sweet Gaueston: What needst thou, love, thus to excuse thyself? 60 I know thou couldst not come and visit me: /-will not long be from thee, though I die. Reads. This argues the entire love of my lord; When J forsake thee, death seize on my heart: Beads. But stay thee here where Gaueston shall sleep. 65 Now to the letter of my lord the king.--He wills me to repair unto the court, And meet my Gaueton: why do I stay; Seeing that he
