

More Tish

It is doubtful if Aggie and I would have known anything about Tish's plan had Aggie not seen the advertisement in the newspaper. She came to my house at once in violent excitement and with her bonnet over her ear, and gave me the newspaper clipping to read. It said: Wanted: A small donkey. Must be gentle, female, and if possible answer to the name of Modestine. Address X 27, Morning News. Well, I said when I had read it, did you insert the advertisement or do you propose to answer it? Aggie was preparing to take a drink of water, but, the water being cold and the weather warm, she was dabbing a little on her wrists first to avoid colic. She looked up at me in surprise. Do you mean to say, Lizzie, she demanded, that you don't recognize that advertisement? Modestine? I reflected. I've heard the name before somewhere. Didn't Tish have a cook once named Modestine?
