

El señor Silas Marner, un bondadoso tejedor, es acusado de un robo abyecto cometido por su mejor amigo, lo que le obliga a exiliarse de su comunidad. Se instala en Raveloe, un pueblo apartado, en donde se convierte en un solitario y hurano avariento cuya existencia se reduce al trabajo en el telar y a acumular un tesoro en monedas de oro y plata. Dos sucesos inesperados cambiarán su amarga monotonía: el robo de su dinero y la súbita aparición en su casa de una niña huérfana. El destino de ambos se verá ligado al de Godfrey Cass, el hijo del terrateniente local, quien, al igual que Silas Marner, está atrapado por su pasado. Silas Marner fue la novela preferida de George Eliot y uno de los relatos clásicos que más han reconfortado a sucesivas generaciones de lectores.
