

Poor and Proud; Or, The Fortunes of Katy Redburn

Give me a flounder, Johnny? said a little girl of eleven, dressed in coarse and ragged garments, as she stooped down and looked into the basket of the dirty young fisherman, who sat with his legs hanging over the edge of the pier. Ill bet I wont, replied Johnny, gruffly, as he drew the basket out of the reach of the supplicant. You neednt come round here tryin to hook my fish. You hooked em, said another juvenile angler who sat on the capsill of the pier by Johnnys side.
