Not illustrated. 1793 edition. Excerpt: ...csV.--The number of horses cannot be exactly ascertained, but the breed is much improved by English stallions coming into the parish, in the summer season, and the tenants, in general, breed and bring up as many young horses as supply themselves. Every farmer rears a considerable number of young cattle, which, after reserving a sufficient number to keep up their stock, are sold to jobbers and dealers, when they are one or two years old, who carry them to the Carliflr and other markets. The price of a good year old slirk is 3 1. or 3 1. 3 s. The number of sheep kept in the parish is very inconsiderable, moft of the tenants being debarred from keeping them, on account of the hedges and planting. Many swine are also raised in this parish, which are fed with potatoes and corn, and, when fat, sold to dealers, who cure and export their carcasses. Price of Provisions, Labour, &c.--The average price of oatmeal, for these 7 years past, has been 20d. per stone; the price of barley, during that period, has not been lower than 6 s. nor higher than 10 s. 6 d. per Carlisle bushel; the medium, therefore, may be estimated at 8 s. Considerable quantities of oat-meal are annually exported to Greenock and the west coast; and all the barley, except the small portion retained for home consumpt, is bought up for the Liverpool market, where oats are frequently sent. Considerable quantities of potatoes are also exported. Grain is shipped at the mouth of the river Annan, and at a small harbour called Powfoot, in this parish. The wages of men servants are, in general, about 8 1. per annum; of women, 3 1. 0 s. or 4 1. per annum, besides maintenance. They are all hired from half year to half year; and the late increase of wages mayvbe imputed to the vicinity of England,...
