

The Award

A play. A poor little Taliban boy coming from a poor background, this meets the standards all those endless rights awards always went to people with wealthy backgrounds, from Gandhi to Malala there s something bloody wrong worldwide the idea of a rights awards comes from the western world, something must be wrong with the western world even Mandela came from a wealthy background of kings there s something wrong with all those awards according the French Revolution equality is a human right all the hailed Native Americans came from wealthy backgrounds, all chiefs and kings it s everywhere the same not even in a war the poor get the big awards as the poor Taliban boy get the rigths award, soldiers from other countries questioned their role and culture, what kind of culture do they defend, a culture that hails the wealthy and gives any important role to the wealthy including the awards (the OECD got it anyway and criticized the procedures, without much change) ? Salman Rushdie hails and follows people with rights awards, all those people come from wealthy backgrounds it s something wrong the poor always are hailed as unknown volunteers at big meetings for countless volunteers - and then a poor Taliban boy, a scandal, gets a human rights award.
