

Rollos Philosophy. [Air]

[...] Perhaps you never saw a crows body, said his father. His feathers and his tail, which are very light, swell out his body, and make it appear much larger than it really is. I presume his wings, when they are spread, are twice or three times as long as his body. If you had wings in proportion, it would be with the utmost difficulty that you could use them at all. You certainly could not strike the air with them fast enough to pull yourself up by them. I did not think that the birds pulled themselves up by the air, said Nathan. I did not know that the air was anything real.[...].
