

The Good Guy with a Gun (Jim McGill series Book 6)

One Saturday morning, a new client comes to Jim McGill with a desperate plea. Zara Gilford says someone is planning to kill her husband. Jordan Gilford is famous as a whistle-blower who exposed corruption at two major defense contractors. Now, he works for the Inspector Generals office at the Pentagon. Zara tells McGill someone wants to make sure Jordan doesnt find any thievery inside the Department of Defense. That same morning, Abel Mays, a despondent public high school football coach who has lost two star players from his team to the recruiting efforts of the coach at the exclusive Winstead School in Georgetown, uses an assault weapon to gun down the players who deserted him, their new coaches and the teammates who try to intervene. Then Mays is found shot dead in his SUV after his weapon is used to kill one last victim: Jordan Gilford. For FirePower America lobbyist Auric Ludwig this is a dream come true. A good guy with a gun has killed a bad guy with a gun. Zara Gilford isnt buying the idea that Mays killed her husband. She persuades McGill to find out who really killed him. McGills investigation threatens Ludwigs narrative. But a political firestorm is just one of the problems McGill will face. The president asks her henchman to bring Jordan Gिल्फोर्डs killer in alive, and thats when things get really dangerous.
