Not illustrated. 1848 Excerpt: ... standard as sufficiently implied in the participle avarerajitvov. 3. ir tippy. On the start, i. e., just preparing to set out.--a/xa fjMif ayuTxom-With the rising tun.--Tev$avias. Teuthrania was the name of a town as well as district in Mysia, distant about seventy stadia from Elsea, Pitane, Atarneus, and Pergamus.--ycyovis diro Artfiapdrov. Sprung from. Demaratus. Observe that the article appended to Aduvos, which follows in the text, indicates that he was well known in history. Demaratus, having been deposed from the throne of Sparta by the intrigues of Cleomencs, crossed over into Asia, to Darius Hystaspis, who received him honourably, and presented him with lands and cities. Observe here the change to the oratio recta, and the resumption of the oratio obliqua in eft;. The direct mode of speaking is expressly employed in Tf6vT)Kev, in order to express more forcibly the important nature of the communication.--Idev rp vporepaiif iipfxwvro. Schneider conjectures here Sipfirjvro, and it is more than probable that his conjecture is correct, since the sense requires the pluperfect rather than the imperfect.--Kai eyoi. The reference is to Ariasus.--et p.4koiev fycetj/. In case they intended to come.--T Si KAAp, tc. r. A. But he said that on the next day he will depart for Ionia. Observe here the employment of a7UfVai, the present infinitive of fareitii, in a future sense. (Kuhner, 397.) 4.--Trvv0av6p.tvoi. We have retained this, with Dindorf and Poppo, although it savours of an interpolation, and although we might have expected
