

The Christmas Lights - a holiday story

Aging veteran Jeremiah is sitting alone in his house on the first Thanksgiving after his wife of over fifty years passed away. At 82, Jeremiah thinks there's no point to Christmas anymore and that the world, and especially his neighborhood, have passed him by. Two neighborhood children take the time to teach the elderly man a lesson in understanding that goes beyond language and skin color, while reminding him that Christmas is a universal holiday. The Christmas Lights is a family-friendly short story about loss, love and understanding in an ever-changing world. This story is about 2,300 words, or ten pages. Perfect for reading aloud with children at the holidays.
